Faribault Family Has a New Home for the Holidays

FARIBAULT — I'll Be Home for Christmas took on a new meaning for a local family this holiday season.

Jason and Tracy Baker of Faribault and their five children lost their mobile home in a fire last June. Thankfully, the family was not home at the time. However the Baker's did lose their two pets in the blaze: Lucas, a 10-year-old German Sheppard and Shelly, a two-year-old Sheltie.

"It was just devastating," Tracy said. "Everything we worked for was gone. The hardest part was the pets. The house just became a thing with four walls, but losing our pets really hurt us a lot."

After the fire, the family lived with Tracy's mother in a two-bedroom mobile home and contemplated what to do next. The recovery process began immediately, and was accelerated during cleanup. The family manually tore down the remains of their former home and began searching for other housing options.

"Once tearing down the house was done, we began to move on and try to heal," Tracy said. "That made everything final for us."

A big part of the healing process was trying to find a new place to live. With five kids, renting was a ST. PAUL -- USDA Rural Development of Minnesota had the honor and privilege of hosting the Rural Renaissance meeting in Minneapolis on October 30 and 31. The State Director's, Administrative Officers and Public Information Coordinators joined Rural Development Under Secretary Thomas Dorr and other national Rural Development leaders for two days to discuss the future of our agency and how we can serve rural America in more innovative and efficient ways.

Many of you are probably asking, "What exactly is the Rural Renaissance?"

The Rural Renaissance refers to the many new opportunities for growth and wealth creation in rural America. Rural America is constantly evolving, and it's essential that USDA Rural Development evolve with it. The Rural Renaissance meeting in Minneapolis gave us all the opportunity to discuss ways we can position ourselves to be the leading advocate for rural communities everywhere.

Another thing we discussed at the Rural Renaissance meeting is establishing specific goals and objectives at the local, state and national level. Minnesota now has a set of specific goals and objectives that we will be working to achieve each and every year. These goals ensure that we are out in the communities we serve and are informing everyone about our programs. The goals will help each and every person at Rural Development become a better advocate for our rural communities.

last resort. The Baker's wanted to find a home, but struggled to find something they could afford.

Then the family learned about the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Rural Development program.

The Baker's applied for housing assistance through USDA Rural Development in mid-August. Rural Development's single-family housing program's help low and moderate income individuals and families purchase homes in rural areas, generally defined as a city with a population of 20,000 or less.

"We're low income, so there's no way we could afford a traditional home," Tracy said. "We couldn't go back to renting. The people at Rural Development were very helpful in helping us get a home we could afford."

The subsidized loan they received from Rural Development enabled them to provide a four bedroom home for their children with manageable monthly payments. The Baker's moved in on Dec. 14, just in time to trim the tree, hang the stockings and send a change-of-address form to Santa.

"I wanted to be in a new home before Christmas very badly," Tracy said. "I remember asking Rural Development before the loan money came in how long we had to wait before we make any offers. I wanted to move in right away!"

the loan process and was there to answer any questions the Baker's had. Securing funding and buying a new home can be an intimidating process for some people. Rural Development works to make that process as smooth as possible for applicants.

"Our staff is right there to help when needed," said Steve Wenzel, State Director of Rural Development in Minnesota. "We pride ourselves on being advocates for rural Minnesota and we have staff throughout Minnesota ready to assist you."

That assistance, combined with a positive and hard-working attitude from the Baker family, helped turn a nightmare into a dream come true.

New Multi-Family Housing Program Director

On another note, I am proud to announce the appointment of Karen Thompson to the position of Multi-Family Housing (MFH) Program Director for Minnesota.

This is a very key appointment for the agency and for all of rural Minnesota. Karen brings almost 30 years of USDA knowledge and experience into her new position as Program Director and will serve the needs and interests of the agency well. She has also been a supervisor in the agency for the last 23 years.

"Minnesota has the fourth largest MFH caseload in the nation, serving over 11,500 households."

Karen began her career in 1979 with USDA in Pine City. Since 1984 she has served as the Rural Development office supervisor of the Buffalo office. Her knowledge and experience will be essential as Minnesota continues to service one of the largest MFH portfolios in the nation and implements the Rural Renaissance Initiative.

Minnesota's MFH portfolio consists of about 640 projects and serves about 11,500 low-income households. We have projects in 84 of Minnesota's 87 counties and provide rental assistance to about 6,500 households. Minnesota has the fourth largest MFH caseload in the nation.

Lender outreach and guaranteed loan programs

Be sure to check out page four of this edition of the Rural Minnesotan for a complete schedule and itinerary for a series of meetings we will be holding throughout the state to highlight our guaranteed loan programs.

Each meeting will highlight and explain in detail our guaranteed lending programs and give each and every one of you the opportunity to tell us how we can meet the needs of your community. If you're a lender, nonprofit, healthcare administrator, or economic development authority, I strongly encourage you to attend a session in your area.

USDA Rural Development Active in Flood Relief Effort

AUSTIN — USDA Rural Development continues to play an active role in the flood recovery effort in southeastern Minnesota. Rural Development officials toured the flooded region in early September and have been working with communities and individuals in the impacted areas.

“We’re not a designated emergency relief agency like FEMA, the SBA or certain state agencies,” said Steve Wenzel, State Director of Rural Development in Minnesota. “But in many instances, we can fill in any gaps and provide assistance if these designated agencies are unable to do so.”

Rural Development has financing available for home repairs, new home purchase or construction, community buildings such as city halls, hospitals, day cares and fire stations, emergency response vehicles and equipment, business financing and job creation.

Individuals and communities should call the local office in Austin at (507) 437-8247, or visit Rural Development’s website at www.rurdev.usda.gov/mn to learn more.

So far, the city of Houston has applied for financing through Rural Development to purchase a new fire truck and three homeowners have applied for Rural Development funds to repair damage to their homes caused by the flood. A Rural Development-financed wastewater project under construction in Hokah was slightly damaged by the flood and Rural Development officials assisted to resolve the problem.

There were also Rural Development-financed apartment buildings located in Rushford, Byron, St. Charles and Lewiston that were impacted by the flooding. Rush Creek apartments in Rushford was destroyed and Rural Development staff worked to ensure that tenants were given priority to move into other federally funded housing. The Rushford Manor project, also in Rushford, sustained significant damage and Rural Development is working with the owners and management company to determine the feasibility of rehabilitating the building. The projects in Byron, St. Charles and Lewiston sustained minor damages that have already been repaired.

Other impacted Rural Development projects in the region included a fire truck in Rushford, & Good Shepherd Assisted Living in Rushford.

BENCO Electric Cooperative Awarded $12 Million Loan

MANKATO — Minnesota welcomed James Andrew, the administrator of Rural Development’s Utilities Programs, on Sept. 28 to officially award BENCO Electric Cooperative a $12 million loan. BENCO will use the loan to replace or build 198 miles of distribution line, purchase 1,660 distribution transformers, add approximately 1,800 new consumers, upgrade approximately 550 existing services, replace about 385 poles, rebuild two existing substations, build one new substation, improve sectionalizing with new sectionalizing equipment and expand load management. The funding and improvement project will impact Blue Earth, Brown, Faribault, Freeborn, Martin, Nicollet and Watonwan Counties.

Minnergy Awarded $300,000 Value-Added Producer Grant

EYOTA — Al Johnson, Senior Advisor to Rural Development Under Secretary Thomas Dorr, visited Eyota on Sept. 19 to award a $300,000 Value-Added Producer Grant to Minnergy. Minnergy will use the grant to help build an ethanol plant in Eyota.

Rural Development's business programs support job growth

The creation and success of Trussworthy Components, Inc. can trace its solid footings to USDA Rural Development programs. Business specialist, Kathy Coyle says the concept of a truss factory in the small n o r t h e r n Minnesota town of Pine River first surfaced on an application for a Rural Business Enterprise Grant (R B E G) from the Cass County Economic Development Corporation. Money was needed to provide quality business counseling to assist entrepreneurs in the economically challenged county. The RBEG supported the work of the EDC's consultant, Gail Leverson. She assisted Trussworthy's Craig Anderson in developing his business plan, application for Minnesota JOBZ tax incentives, and advice on financing. Anderson, a twelve year veteran of the lumber business is a first time

b u s i n e s s owner. Empowered with the knowledge to make quality decisions, Anderson contacted the Initiative Foundation, one of Rural Development's Intermediary Re-lending Program (IRP) participants, for a business loan. When Coyle visited Trussworthy, October 2007, she saw raw wood turn into finished product for lumberyards in a 100 mile radius and custom trusses created for specific building projects in the lakes area. What began as just a dream a few years ago is now employing 23 people in the Pine River area. Down the road, in Hackensack, MN., a similar scenario played out as Leverson advised Jim Johnson, the founder of the Hackensack Senior Class, LLC, a 37-unit assisted living facility. The Initiative Foundation also assisted with an IRP business loan for the construction of the $4.5m complex that employs 20 area people. Johnson, a community leader, also realized the need for a clinic and pharmacy in the small town so he partnered with St. Joseph's Medical Center to include that medical facility within the senior complex.
