Secretary of Agriculture

This past year the Bush Administration continued a strong commitment to expanding jobs and bringing renewed economic opportunities to rural America through strong leadership and strengthened programs.

One of the President's top priorities is to create new jobs and help spark economic growth. The tax relief package that the President signed into law in 2001 continues to help families throughout America and USDA's Rural Development programs are also creating new opportunities. In 2002 for example, economic grants and loans provided by USDA helped create or protect more than 150,000 rural jobs. As well, Rural Development programs provided more than $12 billion in economic infrastructure grants and loans, helping improve education, healthcare, telecommunications, water treatment facilities, fire protection efforts, and other community centers. However, USDA's commitment to improving rural America didn't stop there. Employees worked with local communities to provide homeownership financing for more than 42,000 families. These efforts are helping move closer to reaching the President's goal of increasing minority homeownership by fifty percent in five years.

The Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 signed by the President last May provides new resources and programs aimed at making continued progress in rural America. This includes new grant programs to assist in the development of renewable energy sources; funding to expand the availability of information technologies; and financing for community water and wastewater improvements.

As we embark upon a new year, we have a strong agenda and many opportunities to strengthen America's rural communities. The Administration will continue to build upon the principles outlined in our policy publication, "Food and Agricultural Policy: Taking stock for the New Century". Our team at USDA will continue working with all interested parties and build new coalitions to help families, create jobs and invest in America's rural sectors.

A strong and vibrant economy in rural America serves as the cornerstone of President Bush's economic agenda. USDA Rural Development is working hard to expand economic opportunities and improve the quality of life for all of the 59 million Americans living in rural communities. Through the efficient and effective delivery of Rural Development initiatives, new jobs have been created, homeownership has increased and families and businesses have been strengthened. New investments and entrepreneurial spirit will continue to grow, bringing increased opportunity to rural areas.

I know and understand that rural Americans are resilient and share a pioneering spirit that will once again forge new frontiers in the future. In this same spirit, USDA Rural Development's challenge is to look beyond today and to envision a better way to work with America's rural communities to improve existing partnerships, and forge new ones.

Thomas C. Dorr
Under Secretary for Rural Development

In looking back over the last year, we have begun to build an economic foundation, shaped like what President Bush advocates. I am proud of the aggressive efforts by USDA Rural Development employees to quickly turn many of the 2002 Farm Bill provisions into new economic hope for America's farmers, ranchers and rural families. These efforts ensured the delivery of $703 million to finance 377 communities water and wastewater infrastructure projects. Additionally, $37 million helped support the development of 231 agricultural value-added ventures that will bring new opportunities for increased revenues to our American farmers and ranchers. In total, over $12 billion was invested through USDA Rural Development programs in rural America in Fiscal Year 2002.

We have accomplished much in Fiscal Year 2002. However, to meet ongoing and future challenges, USDA Rural Development will focus in 2003 on four critical areas of economic opportunity: Housing; Broadband; Bio-Mass; and Equity Capital. I commit USDA Rural Development to administer all our programs and policies fairly, equitably, and honorably. It is the right thing to do, it is what I believe, and I will tolerate nothing less. Through our collective and hard work we will continue to increase the economic opportunities in rural communities and improve the quality of life for all rural Americans.
