Matheson announces wireless grant to Navajo Mtn

A grant of more than $200,000 has been awarded for the construction of a wireless network at Navajo Mountain, Utah. The funding is through the Community Connect Grant Program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Rural Development program. It is designed to help develop broadband transmission in underserved communities.

"Navajo Mountain is one of the most isolated communities in the country. The nearest hospital is over 100 miles away. Having broadband access is vital for Navajo Mountain residents-- particularly for medical providers, senior citizens and children," said Matheson.

Matheson said the grant will provide ten computers for the Navajo Mountain Chapter House. It currently houses the Navajo National Land Administration, the Senior Center, the Department of Employment and Training and the Navajo Mountain Boys and Girls Club.
